

Interactive comment on “Hydrologically transported dissolved organic carbon influences soil respiration in a tropical rainforest” by W.-J. Zhou et al.

W.-J. Zhou et al.

zhouwj@xtbg.ac.cn

Received and published: 2 August 2016

This comment is about Figure S2: why there is a gap in the temperature data? No data is presented between 18 and 21 degrees? Answer: We observed soil respiration every 2 weeks, this may lead a gap of soil temperatures during the spare time. According to the original field data, there were not data observed from 18.2 to 21.0 as the following Answer-Figure1 showed.

Interactive comment on Biogeosciences Discuss., doi:10.5194/bg-2016-225, 2016.

C1

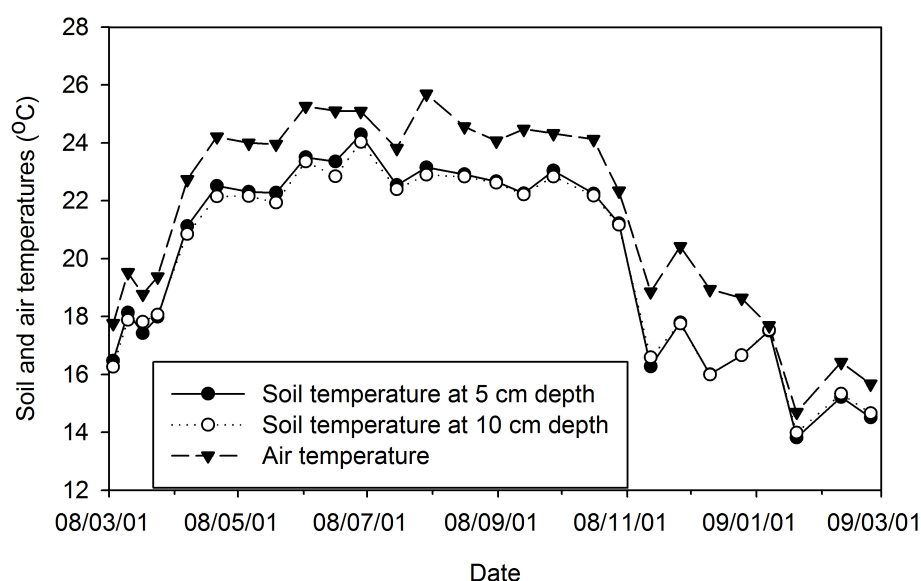

Fig. 1. Answer-Figure1 Dynamics of air and soil temperature at 5cm and 10 cm depths during soil respiration observation period in the tropical rainforest at Xishuangbanna, southwest China.

C2