General words.

We truly thank the Section Editor for the Accept decision based on our last version.

As suggested, in this current version: a thorough linguistic check has been done by a native English speaker. We've also corrected the three minor language suggestions given by Referee 1.

There is no modification on any results or conclusions since last version.

We have erased the old traces from the previous versions. Only modification traces (linguistic check) since the last version are left.

Referee 1:

Thank you for adopting and comparing the partial steady state initialization. I can follow the conclusions now. The paper reads still quite lengthy but I do not have specific suggestions how to improve. I just report a few minor language suggestions:

Authors: Thank you !

p19 l 3 typo: "c.a." You do not need the acronym. I suggest using "approximately" or "about"

Authors: Done

p22 l 24: Suggest replacing "standing for" with "representing"

Authors: Done

p23 K 15 a "more" is missing after "much"

Authors: Done

Referee 2 :

The point that was still problematic was better explained. I now understand better and the calculation of ACCsim is correct.

Authors: Thank you !
